

Abstract

[0034] Possible deficiencies of a communication link are detected and automatically counteracted, at least to some degree. The deficiencies addressed can include 5 phase shift and attenuation compensation. The counteraction can include adjustment of pre-emphasis given a signal applied to the communication link and/or adjustment of equalization given a signal received from the communication link.